Outcomes

- Get the library involved
- Start talking/collaborating/sharing between libraries
- Take MOOCs
- Get in front of licensing and access
- Create MOOCs
- Support MOOC faculty
- Support MOOC students
- Create in-person support opportunities
- Re-assess library assumptions and practices

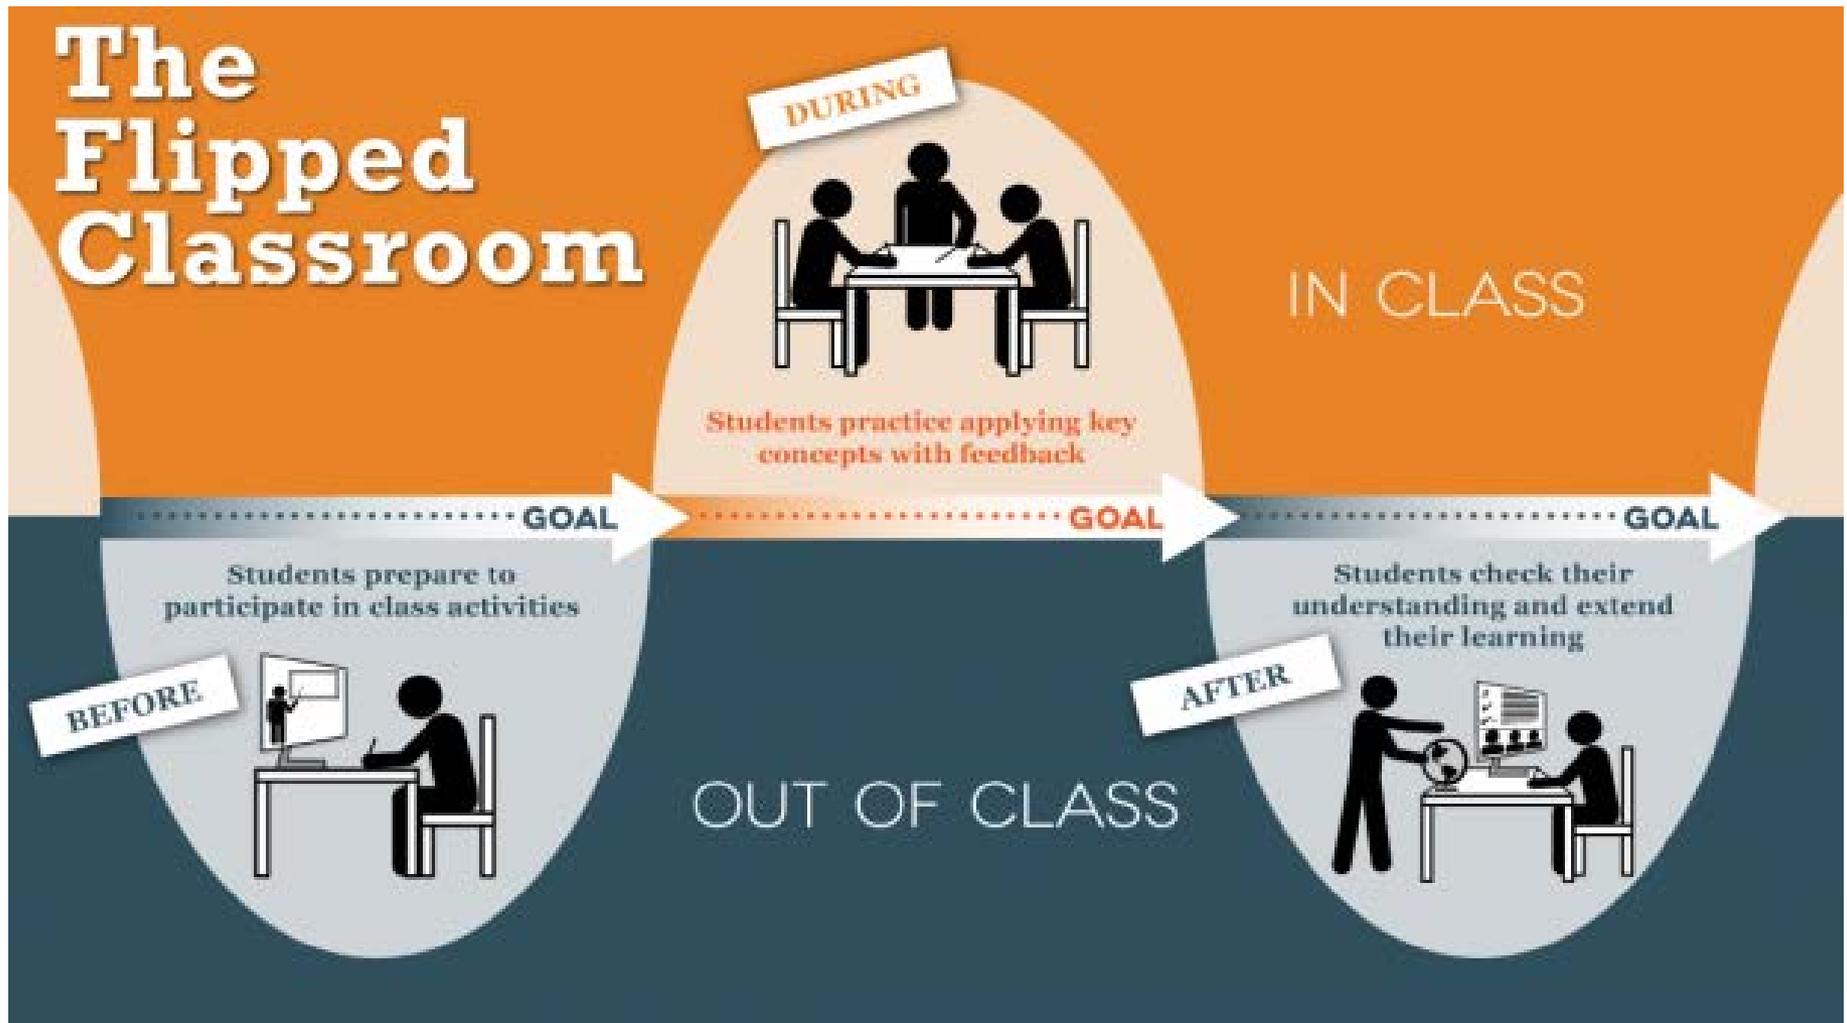

Return to MOOCs

- Weariness of the unfunded mandate
- Need for scaling up information on copyright for faculty (maybe in a MOOC?)
- A handful of institutions doing analysis on use of resources
- Where is the Open in MOOC?

...and on beyond MOOCs

- Challenges of working with edtech staff
- Improve / scale up learning for students on campus (the flipped classroom)
- Extend learning opportunities to distance learners

Tips for using Duke's Databases:

Click on Databases from the Libraries home page. Enter database name, or click Find Database by Subject (then select "Social Sciences" as your category and "Sociology" or "Women's Studies" as your sub-category, for instance).

Databases are labeled as Primary Source, Abstract/Index and Full Text; use these and the information provided as guides for selecting the best databases for your research.

To locate the full-text for items you find in the databases, click Get it @ Duke—a box will pop up and tell you if the item is available online or in print; if the item is not available through Duke, consider requesting it from another library using Interlibrary Loan.

Exploring Duke's Resources

Consider searching the following magazines for advertisements:

- House and Garden (in print in Lilly)
- adies Home Journal (in microfilm in Perkins; in print in Special Collections)
- Life (in microfilm in Perkins; in print in Lilly and Special Collections)
- The Saturday Evening Post (in print in LSC—use the request button)

Consider searching the following databases for advertisements (Ad*Access) and scholarly articles (all others).

Ad*Access includes over 7,000 advertisements printed in U.S. and Canadian newspapers and magazines between 1911 and 1955. Covers radio, television, transportation, beauty and hygiene, and World War II.

Academic Search Premier contains full-text articles and images from over 1800 journals on nearly every academic field of study. Note that Academic Search Premier, MLA, and America History and Life may searched simultaneously.

MLA International Bibliography is the premier database for literary studies, including citations to articles from 1926 to the present.

America: History and Life is the premier database for articles, books and dissertations in American history. Limit your search by time period (1800-1950

Driven by the concept of "Your Library...A World Library," Librarians are a virtual presence in every online course. Librarians consult with online Teaching Faculty and Instructional

Americans are losing the will to pay for their public colleges. They still view a higher education as essential for their personal prospects, for getting a good job and achieving financial security. But they don't want states spending more of their money or raising their taxes to sustain the campuses that educate the majority of the nation's students.

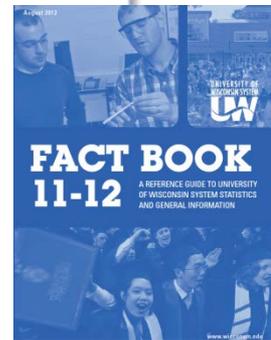

Once embraced as a collective good, a public higher education is increasingly viewed—and paid for—as a private one.

COST OF EDUCATION PAID BY RESIDENT UNDERGRADUATES, 10-YEAR HISTORY

Note: The total Cost of Education is the state and tuition funding used to educate students. The graph shows the relative portion of the costs of educating a student paid by the state and from resident undergraduate tuition each year.
