Gregor, der Mann mit dem Koks ist da

Anonymous

Summary:

Hank goes to cheer up a sick friend, encounters an enemy, and finds love.

Notes:

I realize that literally nobody has seen The Bed Sitting Room but LOOK it just makes sense as a setting for this.

We're going to go with Nurse Arthur being a cis dude / government entity who happens to wear a dress, which appears to be canonical to the film.

Title from Falco's "Mutter, der Mann mit dem Koks ist da"

"Ah, yes. My dear Grete is still so kind, though she did rush me off the phone. I understand that it must be terrible for a child that age to be burdened with such responsibilities. When my arms return to normal, I believe that I will be released from here so I can once again take my place as the eldest son."

Gregor's hands are perfectly normal. "I'm grateful that you don't mind sitting with me despite my disgusting appendages."

You were frightened at first to see Gregor, that is true. His facial hair is overgrown, his dark brown eyes bloodshot and sunken in. He looks to be starving, with his plate packed with fruits and vegetables, and patchy olive skin with fuzzy white in places that looks eerily like mold.
